Field of the Invention This invention relates to a high-pressure chamber which is capable of preventing the occurrence of a "spitting" phenomenon when the discharge of the gas or liquid is started. 2. Description of the Prior Art In a conventional high-pressure chamber, the inside pressure thereof gradually increases from the time of it being used. This is attributable to the fact that there is leakage of the gas or liquid jet discharges from the outer surface of the chamber, thereby becoming a cause of problem. For example, when a spark discharge device is utilized as a corona type charging unit in a copying apparatus, the chamber becomes dirty, and the discharge voltage is lowered. As a result, the quality of the image that is obtained is degraded. This may also occur in other types of device utilizing corona discharge such as a water spray device, etc. The association of household size 3e33713323
