Bollywood is one of the most popular Indian cinema industries along with Indian parallel cinema and Indian independent cinema. The industry is the most prolific film industry in India by volume of released films. As of October 2012, the Mumbai-based Bollywood has made films in 19 official languages [Bollywood, though this is not an accurate definition as some non-Bollywood languages have become more popular than Bollywood, like Punjabi. [Hindi cinema as a popular term in the English-speaking world. Bollywood films are released throughout India and many outside the country, especially in Europe and the Middle East. Bollywood films are heavily influenced by both Western and Indian styles and techniques. Bollywood films have been so influential that it has helped popularize the use of the term Bollywood. History Bollywood is one of India's most popular film industries and one of Asia's largest, releasing approximately 1000 films annually, averaging 200 films per year. [1] Bollywood films have been the most popular genre in Indian cinema from the 1940s to the 2000s, making it arguably the world's second largest film industry after Hollywood. [2] The Bollywood film industry is based in India's most populous city, Mumbai. [3][4] The industry has a long history of being the most prolific film industry by volume of releases, with an estimated average of at least 600 films per year. [5] Bollywood began in the early years of the 20th century as a combination of Bombay Talkies films and Indian films that had been popular since the mid-20th century, such as Dadasaheb Phalke's Indian biographical drama film industry films. Bombay Talkies is credited to film producer Dadasaheb Phalke, who produced a number of short films in the early 1920s. [6] However, Bollywood film production was commercialized by the end of the 1920s, and film-making companies had become a thriving industry. In the 1930s, the Hindu nationalist movement took control of both Bombay Talkies and
