I am working on a program that will generate a sequential program for a video game, and I need to find out how big the sequenced image will need to be for the video game. I've currently programmed my code that generates my images with the following image.

int main(int argc, char *argv[]) { int width, height, i; int biggest, smallest; int image_width, image_height; // get number of input arguments // get numbers of width and height if (argc 5)
