Q: How to make a div scroll into view of another div with jQuery.scrollTo? Is there any way to make an element scroll into view of another? What I have done: `jQuery(function() { jQuery('#some').scrollTo('#target'); });` Some things I've tried: `jQuery(function() { jQuery('#target').scrollTo('#some'); });`; `jQuery(function() { jQuery('#target').scrollTo('#some', 400, function() { console.log(this); }); });`; `jQuery(function() { jQuery('#target').show('#some'); });`; `jQuery(function() { jQuery('#target').show('#some').focus('#target'); });`; A: Try something like this: `var _self = jQuery(this); _self.scrollTo($('#div[id*=target]')[0], 400, function(){});` Keep in mind though, that there's no repainting the scrollbar. A: If you want an element to appear in a scrollable window, you can use `scrollTo()` with a margin parameter; however, this leaves the scrollbar behind, so you would need to use `hide()` to get rid of it. Source: Also see: Stop scrollable div from appearing A: First, you need to add relative position to both `#some` and `#target`: Now you can use `scrollTo()` for `#some` to move it to `#target`: `var _self = $('#some');` `_self.scrollTo($('#target')[0], 400, function(){});` [Clinical, epidemiological and neuroradiological features of ischemic and hemorrhagic cerebellar infarct]. Cerebellar infarcts can be classified into two broad categories: infarcts of vascular and hemorrhagic origin. Hemorrhagic cerebellar infarcts are much more common
