The amazon are the Earth's largest land mammals (excluding sea creatures). They live in the Eastern Hemisphere, and parts of the Western Hemisphere. They range from 160 to 250 pounds (70 to 110 kg). Amazon typically have a long, slim, flat head and limbs, including thighs that are much shorter than their large arms. They may be distinguished from other primates by their large, triangular-shaped heads and the elongated crown and snout. The Amazon is a social, hunting, fruit-eating herbivore. The group consists of a dominant male with harems of several females, and offspring with helpers of various ages. More information on Amazon can be found here: Amazon are very beautiful and powerful, all the males look the same when they're in the wild, and the Amazon needs a few of the Creatures To Be born to have a mate, the peak of the mating season is the summer, so go out and find a mate as soon as you can, the one who is the leader of the males in the game can have more chances and there are less males with more chances, remember, the more you fight the more it will build up your defense and the more difficult it will be to battle the boss, so fight carefully and wisely in battle. Amazon tend to leave their home ranges in the rainy season and return to their home ranges during the dry season. Amazon travel in groups with several females and a few young males. They are also known to travel in large groups of males. They travel quickly, and stalk their prey on foot and may climb trees to get to their prey. Amazon can easily climb trees and travel on vines. They use long, strong legs, soft fur, and sharp claws to climb. Amazon have a long life, typically about 20 years. The lifespan of an individual depends on the availability of food. Sexually, amazon are seasonal breeders, mating between January and June, with offspring from early July to September. The biggest threat to Amazon is hunting for trophy hunting, so please hunt them in a respectful and considerate manner. After finding the amazon's home range, but before engaging in a battle with it, it may be a good idea to prepare yourself, since the female amazon will require a few Creatures To Be born

2 Sausage Fiesta 2 is a dice game for 1 or 2 players, traditionally played with a small dice board or a set of 12 standard dice. It was created by Ray Greene and published by American Game Supply. History Sausage Fiesta was first sold in 1956 and was originally published by A.W. Jones and then Greene (the Sausage Fiesta won a Game Designers' Award) for game publishing. The popularity of the game grew after a recommendation from Napster. American Game Supply published the game in 2009 with Ray Greene as the creator. Gameplay The goal of the game is to be the last player to roll a two-spot roll or a three-spot roll, also known as a two-three and/or a two-four. If a player rolls the maximum number of dice before reaching this total, they lose the game. This is known as "one-ing" or "scrapping". Players take turns rolling one die each. Scraps are not allowed when rolling the last die (if this ever happens, a player is out of the game and no dice are rolled). As the game progresses, the amount of players who "one" decrease, as it is highly illegal to one-nap a player. Strategy To win the game, you need to be the last player to roll either a two-spot or a three-spot before the end of the round, thus "winning" means the two other players have lost the game. Strategy begins with the last player rolling a two-point. Finding the right number of dice for this roll can be difficult, because the game begins with the number of players (including the last player) reflected by the number of dice rolled. Therefore, the goal in this case is to minimize the number of dice used while maximizing the number that end up above a 2 or 3, and so can complete a two or three. If you have no choice but to use any number of dice to roll a two, for example, and your goal is to have all seven dice above a 2, then it is advisable to roll the dice in three groups of three to ensure one of the groups has at least a three in each group: 7 fours ----- 4 sixes 3 sevens This will ensure that there are a two in one group, and a three in each group. And in the above scenario, four
