This course will provide students with experience in facilitating small group discussions that make the concepts of interprofessionalism explicit. The course will bring together current state-of-the-art views about interprofessional practice on the one hand, and the patient/client/practitioner views on the other. Students will also acquire the skills, knowledge, and attitudes necessary to incorporate interprofessional learning into their education and practice. Course Objectives: Understand and demonstrate the therapeutic value of interprofessional care Explain how interprofessionalism helps the health care team deliver the best care for the patients Become more aware of the role of the patient in the health care team Develop a greater appreciation for both the unique nature of each professional's practice and the essential collective nature of health care Demonstrate comfort with the principles and practices of collaborative healthcare Implications for Education: As an instructor, you are part of the learning team. There is an opportunity to explore the "what, why, how" to teach and the "how much" of learning together. What is required of the faculty member who teaches in an interprofessional course? How can I differentiate my teaching for learners who are not yet knowledgeable about the topic of interprofessional practice? How can I improve the learning experience for students who have little knowledge of interprofessional practice? How can I better evaluate learners' preparedness for interprofessional learning? How can I improve the

I have extracted features from my data (7 different types of features). How do I use ML.R to classify and classify my data? A: This is too long for a comment. First, you need to decide how you want to learn your machine learning model. There are several possibilities, which you can explore by reading about the following algorithms. Once you have chosen a learning technique, it is possible to fit the model to the training data. You can either do this by using the fast GridSearch function from ML.R, or more elegantly, as the documentation recommends, by using the gridsearch.model function in ML.R. Once you have created the model, and selected the features, you then have a choice over the specific method you want to apply to classification, and hence you decide how to work with the test data. So in summary: You need some training data, which will be used to train a machine learning model.
