Associative-sensitive graded persistent odor coding in the leopard gecko. The ability to discriminate odors with overlapping sensory features depends on odor intensity coding and is continuously improved by associative learning mechanisms. Here, we test whether the leopard gecko (Eublepharis macularius) can process odor similarities in a graded manner and, if so, whether its brain processes this in parallel with intensity coding. We show that geckos can learn to associate test and standard odors after a single conditioning trial, by demonstrating that the reward magnitude of test odors is comparable to that of trained odors. We further show that the leopard gecko's ability to detect changes in odor concentration is associated with changes in sensory features, that is, odor similarity, and that this ability depends on species-specific rapid olfactory learning mechanisms. Together, our results reveal that the leopard gecko has the computational capability of associative-sensitive graded odor coding.GHS School GHS School is a preschool located in Fort Lauderdale, Florida. It is one of two independent, non-sectarian daycare centers located in Broward County, Florida. Mission statement "GHS School embraces an educational philosophy of openness and respect through the development of each child through the environment that we create in each child's individual learning environment." History GHS School was founded in 1975 by Ms. Mary Beth Brogan (now Mary Beth Dean). In 1981, Ms. Brogan brought her philosophy of education to the nascent Fort Lauderdale Diocese of the Roman Catholic Church. Using her deep Catholic faith, plus her gifts in nurturing, leadership and openness to new ideas, she formed GHS School which accepts children from any religious or political affiliation. GHS School continues to be a place where families can learn, grow, and share community.
