Fantasy Grounds - Deep Magic Features Key:

An all-new system for controlling custom spells
A new player skills system
Deep Magic spells bring carnage to enemies
Player interface revisions
Stability and optimization improvements
Graphics improvements
64-bit Mac OS X support (Full screen)
Expansion community focus

Fantasy Grounds - Deep Magic Extended Feature List:

- The new spell system has a revised combat mechanics; weaker attack spells with large AoE cause more damage, and larger time to cast spells. Spell effects will scale with their mana cost, and attacks will scale with player power/level
- Phases are now a skill level 3 action to use; this allows many useful decisions, but also adds an overdraw system to spell components. If a spell allows between a series of effects, and spells with different components have drawn different views of the field, only the effects used on the target will resolve. The player must control their spell components in order to perform a spell phase properly
- A new Battle setting rules common to all abilities, which can be selected at any point. Battle is a face-to-face combat, and the action resolution use rules to represent both action and reaction, so that you can make some crucial and game-ending decisions that fail if you aren't really paying attention
- Acid and poison weapons have been overhauled to allow a spell caster to poison a weapon causing it to do even more damage if they strike it 3 times, or to poison a weapon upon impact. Acid weapons have been similarly changed, with spells doing a series of damage effects that may also damage the allies of a damaging weapon strike

- Clickable HFX cards have been added to Summon cards, representing the type of magic card, such as Frost, Fire, Storm, etc.
- Increased buffering on the network, hopefully allowing the game to scale if it has to run across the Internet
- Mac OS X compatible now, and Game Centre integration

The Deep Magic User Guide is now available in the Downloads section of the Fantasy Grounds homepage

After a long wait, testing for the Apple Car is happening right now, and we got our hands on one just before Apple's event on Monday. Inside the Apple Car The 2017 Apple Car, at least for now, is a little bit less flashy than the concepts we've seen over the last few years. It doesn't look quite as futuristic, but it's still undeniably sleek. The Carbon Fiber Concept The Apple Car has been in development for years, but hasn't seen much external changes. We've known its basic shape ever since the Carbon Fiber Concept was unveiled back in 2014. It's basically a much more mainstream version of the original concept — one that looks a little bit more production-ready. What Is Apple Car? The car doesn't have a name yet, but that doesn't mean we can't take a look at its capabilities. When it eventually does come to market, the 2017 Apple Car will come with driverless technology, and be Apple's first attempt at creating an autonomous vehicle. The 2017 Apple Car will also offer three levels of semi-autonomous driving, depending on your needs. Level 1 makes it easier to park

Tarot to play the AU Steve Jackson's RPG Deep Magic Tarot
How do I play the Deep Magic Tarot card game?
What classes do I use and what spells should I be able to equip? What spells should these levels be able to take? And how do I get a playing deck? Deep Magic is a Tarot game inspired by the features and mechanics of the Mage sub-class from Full Metal Alchemist Brotherhood, and uses RPG numerology. The below sample decks are custom made for use in Fantasy Grounds. Instructions provided for the game and players are as follows:

- The card numbered 1 to 7, and numbered "2 to 9" are Powers. The card numbered 1 to 7 are the typical basic spells, while numbered 2 to 9 are the "Mages" spells.
- The number of dots on the card are level, the image is the spell description, and the colored scribble is the experience requirement to cast.
- Players take turn to play and cast spells, 1 to 7 dots is for the basic spells, while the 2 to 9 dots is for the "Mages" spells. Players play face down, any discard causes players one rank loss. The basic mechanics are: If a player has enough experience to cast a certain spell, then the player may discard a Power. The player loses experience equal to the Power it discarded, but gains XP equal to the Level value of the Power being discarded. The player can discard a Power any number of times during the game and it is stack with all Powers previously discarded. However, starting at level "12, dice are involved" for the "Mages" Spells. The rules for the "Mages" Spells are as follows: - Dice are moved up the 'deck' card, and duplicate of the same card marked "2" is rolled- Dice are moved face down- Player Loses the amount on top of the card as XP, but gains amount as Stamina- A player can take no more XP then is his level- No more moves are possible as long as no dice has been rolled- The player can not discard a used up card- The power is discarded if no dice is rolled The amount discarded and the amount gained with that stroke of luck last for all players It takes 6 шами to get if dice are matched and an additional 3 ша
