"It is extremely difficult to recreate the intensity of a football match without capturing real-life movement and the increased speed and control of the game makes for an exciting evolution of our game's control scheme," says lead gameplay engineer, Michael Osiander. Motion capture provides a level of authenticity and precision not achievable by traditional input methods such as joysticks, control pads and gamepads. "Players may have to move faster and more dynamically in real-life. This makes it even more important for us to set a new benchmark for our control scheme," Osiander adds. The motion-based control method will fully replace the traditional D-pad, menu system and first-person camera. Instead, players will use a series of pre-defined animations to represent motions. Intuitive and streamlined control Once created, animations will be assigned to the right-stick which will be mapped to player movements in the first person camera. Players will be able to swap between controls and motions easily, enabling them to use intuitive, familiar gameplay in an entirely new way. Players can also adjust settings and switch to different control schemes via the options menu. "FIFA games have been very successful in using the pressure-sensitive thumbstick and we have been doing it for more than two decades," says Sid. "While it is very simple for the player to master the thumbstick, it does not allow for quick and responsive gameplay. Our new thumbstick-based scheme is more robust and provides more control options." FIFA 22 introduces a slew of new features, improvements and gameplay features. Key new additions include: Improved Player Dynamic. Each player comes with their own personal set of skills and attributes. One player could be the fastest, while another may be the most physically powerful. The attributes of every player are now varied with unique traits, and players can be given a score based on their technical traits so that players can be ranked. New Attacking Dynamic. Players can now generate attack intensity and maintain their speed even with less possession. Coupled with increased Player Dynamic, EA Sports has given all players more consistency on the pitch. Players will now find more success, even with less possession. Defensively, players will be more adjusted to the situation, and control a player's willingness to make a tackle. Reinforced Attacking System. Defending set
