I'm using the Zend Framework, so I figured there has to be a library for it. The problem is, I don't want to have to setup my application to consume oauth tokens, as that seems like a pain for a site that doesn't even need to interact with Twitter. A: It would be very easy to roll your own with a curl request to the proper API endpoint. As per the documentation for the GET statuses/public_timeline method you can add a screen_name parameter to the URL: GET /statuses/public_timeline?screen_name=romeo This will list the latest public tweets from @romeo AUGUSTA — A bill to limit benefits for the top 2 percent of wage earners died in the House on Tuesday, clearing the way for changes to the state's current method of making workers pay taxes at higher rates. The measure, by Rep. Dennis Damon, D-Rockport, would have placed a cap on the value of income of $265,000 in a single year for those who earn a joint income with their spouse. It would have placed a higher cap on income for those who make more than $270,000. The plan would have reduced benefits for the top 10 percent of earners, and it would have left all other taxpayers alone. The 10-percent cap would have been at $237,000. Damon said Tuesday that he killed the plan to avoid undermining another bill that he has sponsored. He said he plans to introduce it next year and said he expects to have a veto-proof majority in the House. "I am very happy," Damon said. The current $15,000-per-worker benefit, set by a legislative commission in 2009, is among the highest in the country. The 2010 plan to change the earned income tax system is currently being reviewed by an eight-member tax

What's new:

(2 Pc/dvd) Navigation: Rarities: Features An album titled Second Class Clothes presents a youthful Dion, and a Dion-lite from 1970 to 1971 as he perfected his music and his sound, while engaged in a never-ending songwriting and recording session. It often takes songs until they're at least decent-ish before performing them again as this set shows. And yet, when they hit the stage, this recording has the gravitas of a new live album. You know how you're in a relationship with someone and they look like they could be the next Brad Pitt? Dion always looked the part of a Hollywood superstar. He exuded Hollywood glitz. Even though he moved on to a whole different type of career for a while (in the mid-70s), he tried to recapture that feel in his music. His comeback was not quite as flamboyant as the glory years, although it involved working with Lee (the Long Ago In Montreal era), as well as millions of new people hearing what he did. But he found himself back on the radio playing classic rock. The album captures that period. It's very British pop glam sound, and Dion wrote and sang very well that phase of his career. The styles range from ballads ("Mystere") to lush power ballads ("Taktezuitsuit" can't miss on anyone's playlist). Also included is a fascinating version of Morrissey's "This Charming Man," one of Dion's underrated masterpieces. Despite the low budgets, production quality can be comparable to the top acts of the period. His voice is a strong "mysterious" and confident, bringing those effortless melodies. But, above all, it's his witty attitude and musical frame which makes this album so extraordinary. Whenever we list underrated albums, you will almost never hear this album mentioned. Yes, it's a classic pop/rock piece of music from the '70s, but it's forgotten by the masses, until recently, that disco fans knew it as well. It's a pop-rock album for sure, and a commanding one at that! Dion hits every high note he can with an ease that is so endearing. There isn't a single time here where you wish he'd slow it down a little. Maybe "Regrettable" and "Beyond In Summertime" lack subtle
