The United States and Italy enter Sunday's quarter-final at the Santiago Bernabeu Stadium having both experienced hooliganism in the past few days, but Terry says it was necessary for Euro 2004 quarter-finalists France to be sent home last month because of their history of trouble in the France-England game. Terry said: "I'm sure every country who is having any kind of altercation or anything like that on that field will play on. "I can see this from my position as one of the best players in the world. We've had other countries that have been sent home. You can't play football that way. "I know that because I was in football when it was all up and running and when we got sent home from France, we had no trouble, but we've still played games and people have made a fuss. "I'm sure it's the same for all nations. I'm sure all countries who have been sent home have fought hard. "I'm sure every team in the tournament will try and give their best and try and put in their best performance to go as far as they can, but I'm sure there'll be fair play and all teams are going to come out to try and win it." Sunday's game is the last Group A match between England and the USA but Terry is relishing the occasion because of the familiarity with one of his
