– KSS Karaoke Review by Michonah Dunham Turning down this one feels like an opportunity to get caught with your pants down. There are so few DJ-Karaoke shows and most of them can't boast a canon in the form of a soundscape. 'Murder on the River Thames' is one of the exceptions to this rule. Despite it not being that long, it features the only composer to get his own KSS show. Regardless, Greg Alper wonders aloud, 'Isn't it better if I review the soundtrack of the film in alphabetical order, don't you think?' The jaunty signature tune is a short, upbeat instrumental piece that sounds like a version of the theme from 'Brick-O-Rama', one of the vintage ABC cartoons about bricklayers. It starts with a nice riff played by a piano and later accompanied by the same chord progressions before veering down in key to the common Tango rhythm of 'Twinkle, Twinkle Little Star' and then back to the theme with a descending line during the chorus. Short, eccentric and innocent, yet eagerly memorable, it's The Gillyman Brother's finest hour. The cymbal clashes, stomping bass line and massive fills give this little ditty the stomp of a piece ('Proper' is the suggestion of one listener) that would be perfect for doing that Wile E Coyote impression. Sung in a Briffa-esque Brooklyn accent, the track makes for an ideal intro to the show and an initial sample to revel in the sheer audacity of the track. With the instrumental piece finished, Greg takes us outside for a stroll along the Thames, with appropriate nods to the 'Doggerland' sequence in 'Jurassic Park'. Narrated in part by a trumpeter, some policeman, with an overpaid chorister on the other, we're treated to a reasonably convincing recreation of a 19th century Thames waterfront. The aquatic power of 'The Great Gilly Hopkins' with its high reaching vocals is strangely underused. Possibly for the sake of not matching too closely to the nearly-four-minute-long 'Technicolor Dream', it's just a flash of the massive vocal talent on display on the previous album, KSS

In Floppy Heroes 2, you play as a mouse, two cats, and a pirate who have accidentally gained super-powers! Collect loot, kill goats, save the village, and steal the treasure. It's the classic Floppy Heroes experience updated and expanded for the latest generation of consoles! Key Features: Super Jump: Mouse can now raise his tiny body off the ground, walking along walls and ceilings as he does so. Also, cats and pirates can now execute their own version of the catnip-fueled Super Jump by pressing the A button to leap into the air and swing from vine to vine, crashing into chests and traps. Two new playable characters – One cat, one pirate. Controllable laser cannons – One for each mouse. All three mouse characters can blast away walls, flip across the air, and even turn into iceballs if they so desire. Mouse, cats, and pirates now have super-abilities to suit their needs in combat. Catnip: catnip, sprinkling it on the ground or spraying it directly into a cat's face, causes the cat to spin around and randomly attack enemies. Mouse, cats, and pirates also sprinkle and spray ragdoll; this causes all enemies below them to become a ragdoll and tumble onto the floor. Portable barrel bombs: mice can carry a barrel, drop it on a goat, and explode it, causing the goat to be tossed into the air and explode, and damaging all nearby enemies. Cats, like mouse, can carry a barrel and drop it on a goat to cause the goat to be tossed into the air and explode. Ammo: mouse can carry ammunition in an ammo-fragment and drop it on enemies to damage all nearby enemies. Mouse, cats, and pirates can engage in melee combat by pressing the B button to launch a melee attack with their chosen weapon, using "Laser Katana" as their standard weapon. Ragdolls: mouse, cats, and pirates can also ragdoll themselves, causing all nearby enemies to become a ragdoll and tumble onto the floor. Gunplay: mouse, cats, and pirates now have an opportunity to use their own weapons as well as the weapons of the enemies who attacked them. Archery: mouse, cats, and pirates can "shoot" by drawing their weapons and making a random "arrow" attack.
