What's new in Loren The Amazon Princess - The Castle Of N'Mar DLC:

(June 10th) Hello! Welcome to the second edition of Cosmetics: Riches of the Mirrored City. A couple days late, but I've had some things going on that delay the round, which I'm happy to be giving back to you. Most of what we're talking about today are the Xenosuites, and by Xenosuites, we're referring to: There are three cards in this bundle that all drop Xenosuite cards from one tribe (and some from another). If you missed the deal, it's a discount on all three of these cards - another $5 worth of free stuff for $35. That's a pretty good deal! If you're unfamiliar with Xenosuites, they're the Xenosuites cards. Instead of being like "normal" card cards, Xenosuites cards are randomly drawn, and their entire row is replaced with a set of Xenosuites cards. The cards that replace the whole row are random, but you can notice that a few of them are worth a little bit more than the average. And today we're talking about some of the best cards for the Risen Cultors. Boombox, which is not only a Xenosuites piece of art, but also a good option in the Cult Wars and the Trading Pit. Despite that, it doesn't get enough use today. Boo, also another Xenosuites piece of art, has get enough use in the Trading Pit, but not enough to be extremely valuable. Finally, we close with a jumping pack, which rewards progress towards the character story. So without further ado, let's get to it. Table of Contents Boombox by Akuensis Name: Boombox Cost: $2 Card Type: Xenosuites Artifact Ability: Construct [Version: Infinite] : Shuffle T7 into the deck. The first Xenosuites card played gains Salute (Love tap - you can only use this once per turn. Each additional Xenosuites card played reduces this load by one) Rating: 3.5 The obvious build up: this Xenosuites piece of art is a good piece of art, and in the Cult Wars, it's not bad. Unfortunately, it's not good enough because you have to wait until you play it on turn 10 for one of the best Risen Cultor cards ever to pop
