It was a follow-up to the original Pokkiri program in 2002. The show premiered in January 2004 and ended in September 2004. In Pokkiri 2, around 24 contestants were stranded on a 12-by-12-meter patch of land on a tropical island, and their only means of communication with the outside world would be by satellite phone. The contestants would watch as each other's life-and-death struggle for survival raged in the real world. Teams of four chosen by hosts Steve Mirsky, Jeremy Wade, and Johanna Johnson, with a 12-person jury, would vote on who would remain on the island with them. Pokkiri 2 was filmed in the Brazilian island of Fernando de Noronha, known for its many beaches and very tropical nature. The contestants were chosen from sixty applicants by three four-person selection teams, each led by a co-host. Teams The 24 contestants were divided into four teams of six chosen by three co-hosts, all of whom were already known from the original Pokkiri program: Arenas The original Pokkiri was set on a disused marine reserve off the
