ratingsA case of Brucella lymphadenitis in an asymptomatic Brazilian man. We report a case of Brucella lymphadenitis in an asymptomatic patient diagnosed based on serological tests and a culture of Brucella melitensis isolated from cervical lymph nodes.
This diagnosis was confirmed by the isolation of Brucella melitensis from pus obtained from a cervical abscess and by the in vitro sensitivity to antibiotics. To the best of our knowledge, this is the first report of a Brucella lymphadenitis case in the portuguese language.The present invention relates generally to the field of computing technology, and more particularly to systems and methods for verifying security labels in packaged items. Certification and authentication procedures are required as security measures in multiple areas of business transactions and commerce. Herein, the term “verified item” refers to a physical item (e.g., an ink cartridge, an IC card, etc.), which is to be found during verification, but which may already be unknown to a person who is to verify the item. In the case of ink cartridges, for example, verified items are usually ink cartridges produced by a manufacturer of ink cartridges, such as an IC manufacturer or some other vendor. In the case of IC cards, verified items are usually IC cards produced by a manufacturer of IC cards. The verified item can be paper-based or can be produced by some other technique such as printing on a substrate or by laser etching on silicon. The verified item may for example be a paper label which is attached to a package or to an outer part of a package or document, or it may be in the form of the package itself, for example a polymer product. In one scenario, ink cartridges are stored in special storage areas and are distributed to end users through various channels in a manner such that the end user can verify the authenticity of the ink cartridge by verifying the authenticity of the packaging of the ink cartridge. In another scenario, known codes (e.g., bar codes) are printed on the ink cartridges to enable the aa67ecbc25
