Further, N from the nitride portion is ionized or incorporated into an oxide, with the result that it is known that the composite material has various electrical functions such as a high-temperature superconducting property (see, for example, Patent Document 1). As a method of manufacturing AIN/AI2O3 composite material, for example, a method of mixing metal material, such as aluminum, and nitride of nitrogen as well as a solvent, such as ethanol and water (see, for example, Patent Document 2), or a method of mixing metal
