The aim of this study was to determine the prevalence of the metabolic syndrome in patients with psoriasis compared to healthy controls. In addition, the associations between the individual components of the metabolic syndrome and psoriasis were evaluated. Eighty-seven consecutive patients with psoriasis and 39 healthy controls were included. Demographic and laboratory data were recorded. Metabolic syndrome was present in 37 patients (42.5%) and in six controls (15.4%, P = 0.003). The mean (± standard deviation) age of patients was 55.5 ± 9.7 years, and the mean BMI of patients was 31.4 ± 8.0 kg/m(2). There was no difference in mean BMI between patients with and without the metabolic syndrome (30.2 ± 7.5 kg/m(2) vs. 30.9 ± 7.8 kg/m(2), respectively, P = 0.60). After adjustment for age, sex, smoking, and BMI, the metabolic syndrome was not associated with the severity of psoriasis. Elevated levels of waist circumference (OR, 3.9; 95% CI 1.03-14.6) and triglycerides (OR, 2.9; 95% CI 1.1-7.9) were associated with psoriasis, independently of the severity of the disease. No association was found between insulin resistance and the metabolic syndrome in patients with psoriasis. Metabolic syndrome is commonly seen in patients with psoriasis compared to healthy controls. Therefore, these patients should be evaluated for the metabolic syndrome and, if present, treated accordingly.Avengers: Endgame Earlier this month, a movie on the biggest hero was a hit.
