What's new:

Cafe Tekling Cafe, also known as Tekling Cafe/Dining and Banquet, was an upscale dining and entertainment venue themed around science fiction, created, designed, produced, owned, and operated by comedian and actor Bill Corbett who posed as 'Dr' Forrest Tekling. Tekling Cafe operated in the United States from 1972 until at least 1993. Its heyday was the late 1970s and 1980s. In 2001 Corbett was embroiled in a controversy concerning the origins of the catered event called Tekling Cafe that had been billed as an offshoot of the Philadelphia Flyers hockey team. Precedents and parent company In 1969 the also famous comedian, Stan Freberg on his syndicated radio show began to advertise the prospect of taking groups of people on the road to travel "inside the galaxy...Like for instance, to where?" He urged listeners to write in and receive a concert coupon for a galactic "Teekling Scallar" affair to be hosted in the future. In 1972 Corbett and several fellow comedians (including Dave Frishberg, Rich Kelton, Ed McMahon and Ray Ozzie) began touring the US with the "Galactic Wagon." On the wagons' third trip Bill Corbett developed and performed Tekling, the "expert alien." While Corbett's intergalactic character developed and began to gain currency as a public figure, the name "Teekling Cafe" was commonly used to describe events under his control or that he co-hosted, and the system of patronage for Tekling "tickets" was established. Tekling's system required a brief pre-existing relationship with Corbett that might include gratitude for past favors, or the taker of the ticket was given a small one-time fee of only a few dollars (as Tekling often told his audiences that he was "taking care of people who respect his character", meaning that many Teklings were given in a testimonial). The company that supported the traveling "galactic wagons" under the auspices of Stan Freberg was Tekling Tours, Inc. The "PTA/Good Deeds Ticket System" grew rapidly and was adopted by some localities as their primary or sole source of hospitality service. Corbett Ltd. was the parent company of Tekling Tours, Inc.; Freberg Productions owned 100% of Corbell Ltd. which held the trademark on Dr. Forrest Tekling. Freberg
