Application of Tc-HMPAO in the simultaneous localization and functional imaging of thalamus and caudate nucleus in humans. In the present study, we applied Tc-HMPAO in the simultaneous localization of the thalamus and caudate nucleus for normal controls as well as for patients with Parkinson's disease. The thalamus appeared as a hyperuptake on single photon emission computed tomography and a nodular region on Tc-HMPAO SPECT images, as compared to the cortically reduced uptake in patients.

the dog run, or the patch of grass that you pull the blanket off when it gets too hot to be outside, and then go for a walk and look at the leaves moving in the breeze and the little birds chirping and twittering. Sound totally lame, but it's nice to know there's still a sense of peace and tranquility, however small, in the real world. "I'm beginning to understand the people who are lonely. It's not easy for them to be with other people. We've created the most extraordinary environment of noise, action and stress."—Ray Bradbury, author and screenwriter "I have so much sympathy for the people of New York—for all the people of the world—for all of our loneliness. We are a community of loneliness—there's no escaping that—and no one will ever know our loneliness as we know it."—David Ferry, The Seagull "The way we communicate is to try and make ourselves understood through the effects of ourselves on other people, either inanimate objects, or animals—except for human beings, because they can't be understood in that way."—Gustave Flaubert, author "The thunder, the rumbling of the subway, the roar of the
