Rome: In a 2,000-year-old text found in a church in Italy, Rome warned Christians to take precautions while fighting their enemies. The 2,000-year-old text, dating back to about the year 150 CE, was found on a limestone plaque which once hung in the church of Santa Maria in Cosmedin, and was published on Monday in the British newspaper The Daily Telegraph.

The text, placed in the church to warn Christians fighting against fellow Christians, warned against too much victory and against making too much noise in the battle. The Romans warned against "riotous disorder" and "such excessive glory",
