In some network systems, a source device can transmit information to a destination device via the network. The communication network can have a protocol that defines rules and/or constraints on the information transmitted and/or received by the user. For example, the protocol can determine a maximum rate at which data can be received over the network. The user may be configured with a device that receives the data from the source device at a rate that exceeds the maximum rate and, as such, the user device can continuously receive the data, eventually overtaking the maximum rate of data transmission. In some networks, the maximum rate of data transmission is set once, at the time the user device is provisioned. If the user device continuously receives data at a rate that exceeds the maximum rate, the user device can be configured to throttle the rate at which the user device receives the data, thereby conserving available bandwidth.Q: How to fix the css error in wordpress with using tag I want to ask that how to fix the css of the wordpress with using tag and the file name is "style.css" in the style section, it is not work.
