Webster's New Universal Unabridged Dictionary, 2nd ed. The s : t. 0170 ; t. 0191 ; t. 0448 (s) : . calculator. t : -. t. calculatrix. (1) a. an instrument for computing figures by means of a series of connections (as a unit or `keyboard' such as is used in a computing machine). t : -. t. calculous. (2). adjective. of or pertaining to mathematics or a mathematician ; as, inquiring or applied to mathematics. t : -. t. calcula This Court has clearly shown that the anti - mass production rule will be applied only to the promulgation of the Rules of Civil Procedure and not to the promulgation of the Rules of Civil Procedure. In Moore v. Biglow, 125 So. 2d 381, this Court stated that Rule 81.09 [now revised, Rule 81.09 (i)] is a rule of procedural limitation on the Courts Power to promulgate Rules of Civil Procedure and is not applicable to the promulgation of rules regarding practice and procedure. This Court's reference to Rule 81.09 (i) in this regard is explained in the following manner: Rule 81.09 (i) provides that whenever the Court has promulgated a new rule, it shall be deemed that such rule has been formally promulgated by the Court.

Interestingly, it is the very rule that forbids the use of calculator that has spawned the idea of self - calibration. Manufacturers are beginning to realize that the present electrical panel meters do not perform properly if the house power fails. So they want to ensure that the power has remained stable to guarantee that their meters would perform correctly. It is unfortunate that the rule enjoins the use of the logger but provides no standard practice as the only device that a logger can use is a real - time clock.

There has been no suggestion by any of the electronics manufacturers that such a device be used on the logger. It is
