No "No" competition. Each of us has a chance to be the "Top of the tree". There are 4 agents (4 participants in the contest) The first to reach the end will be declared the winner. Each month three missions will be announced. Each mission has a name and a solution. For every "No" chance, agents are assigned a score. Those who have more "No" chances are always starting from the back. Each "No" has an increasing penalty. The winner will be the agent with the least total penalty. The game ends when the total number of "No" matches the assigned number of "Yes" for the given question. In every match, the player who has announced the number of "No" is entitled to ask his opponent a question, and he does not need to declare its relevance unless he is willing to accept the penalty for "No" plus the penalty for "Yes" minus the penalty for the right answer. "Yes" is always declared to be a penalty of 2 points. If the game ends before a winner is declared, the agent who has achieved the minimum penalty declared by their opponent shall be declared the winner. If there is a tie among the agents in terms of penalty, the one that answered in the right way and has the least "No" was counted as the winner. For any viable season, each game is not counted separately. The number of points of an agent is the total number of points of his/her games. Each agent start from the first mission, which they will be asked by a moderator after the results are declared, to look at their results again. They can choose to look at the result of the missions in chronological order or not. And they can decide to look at their previous games or not. A game is played every month and the following structure can be found in each of the four seasons that will be declared. 1- First game will be declared in AUG. 2- The host of this game will be the agent with the highest average rate for the given month. 3- In this case, the next game will be considered in september. 4- The host of the next game will be the one with the highest average rate for the given month. 5- In this case, the following

Periodicals give readers news and commentary published in various regions of the world and provide a focus on specific issues and aspects of issues. The English-speaking garden is a particularly vulnerable group in this instance. In the summer they are free and find a challenge and wonder at the sight of a new plant and a new gardener. As the fall begins the imagination grows colder and the light shorter. In the winter they are at work and the thought of a new plant can keep them off the deck furniture for months. By spring they'll be ready to step out again and the garden will be a bountiful garden. It's a delicate time in the garden in many places because it's the end of the growing season, and the folks in the U. S. South can tell you that when March comes along, you have to watch out or you'll find yourself laughing on the deck with a snow shovel. But, by then, the spring showers are coming and the variety of emerging plants is inspiration for new combinations and colors. Beginning with the last true spring rain, when everything grows, including the biggest puddle, the seeds that started as sprouts in seed catalogs and note cards finally have a chance to get a bid more urgently called growth. A word here about hydroponic vegetables and plants. In general, I suggest that you don't put a plant in your succulents dish until you know you'll be growing it. Here's the process: Find a plant which is easy to grow from seeds or cuttings and a decent size which has a tap root. Taste bud types would like to taste. Try it and use your own judgement. Put your plant in a container with sterilized soil. Water it generously (with a tray of mister) to get the most water available. Your plant should not be short, but look healthy. Let it sit and water deeply for a week. Take it out and put it in a different spot that will discourage any bad bugs. Don't mix different kinds of plants in a tray: pick out the best from the pot and/or seed catalogue and find a good potting soil. If it's in
