Automated Construction Drawings A substantial number of construction projects are now being designed and constructed using CAD. Often, construction professionals will work directly on top of a completed architectural design using a 2D drafting software application, like AutoCAD. But, other times, the construction professional is given a 2D drawing to review and complete the construction drawings on top of. This is when the CAD software for construction comes into play, How Is Construction CAD Software Different? The CAD software for construction is different than the 2D drafting software for architecture. Architects and structural engineers use different 2D drafting software to create 2D drawings of a proposed structure. These 2D drawings are then modified to suit the project's budget and schedule. Structural engineers use specialized 2D drafting software that is used to create drawings that are called "detailed" or "substantial". These types of CAD drawings are created with the intent of helping construction professionals make detailed design decisions, like specifying the exact amount of concrete and rebar required for a building or bridge. Why Would a Construction Professional Use CAD Software? A construction professional's design decisions are critical to the success of the project. It is important that the contractor's engineers, like the structural engineers, use the most accurate information possible. A typical 2D drafting software for architecture and structural design does not have the capabilities necessary to accurately and consistently create large, highly detailed 2D drawings. How Can Autodesk Help Construction Professionals? Autodesk understands the challenges of working in the construction industry and the difficulty in obtaining accurate 2D drawings. Autodesk provides a wide variety of applications that integrate into the AutoCAD software program, including specialized software tools for: CAD applications for construction 3D modeling Engineering design Mapping and GIS Database management 3D rendering Geospatial technologies Why Choose AutoCAD and AutoCAD LT? In 1982, AutoCAD was the first CAD product to be released as a desktop application. As a result of the product's success, Autodesk began to develop an AutoCAD software as a service (SaaS) business model for the AutoCAD product line. AutoCAD LT was created as an entry-level desktop application for the consumer market. These products are no longer only available on microcomputers, but are now available on any computer. In addition to the desktop software
