I would like to know whether every one tried Reinstall? are there any drawbacks and if yes. please share your experience. Thanks in advance.
A: I would be very upset at Apple if they didn't release a fully patched iDevices. Unless the legal and security auditors have somehow missed a way to break Apple devices, there is no good reason to not allow users to upgrade to the latest software. Your device is the most complicated product Apple makes, so there is a very good reason not to release patches for them. I don't think they ever will. There may be a modicum of validation for preventing users from doing silly things, but I think there are trade-offs. Many users use the specific features in the latest software. Therefore they are harmed if they can't use it. If they can't use it because of an unpatched vulnerability, the reasoning is the same. It doesn't sound like a big deal to me if a device can't be updated. I would try to get it fixed, but I'm not going to go through hoops to patch my device myself. Someone else will, and they will just go through the same hoops. Instead of worrying about the security aspect of it, why not worry about the features? Reinstall means that you have to go through your data from the beginning. Yes, you do have to go through your entire data. Then, you have to go through it again. Yes, you have to go through it again. You are now down to the framework, apps, and launcher and customizations. This is where you can take shortcuts, get faster, and be happy. There are maybe a dozen Apps that I couldn't live without. I make fewer changes, but they are changes that made the phone better. In addition, there are over a thousand apps that are useless for the average user. If I could get rid of them, I would. In fact, I think you can. You can't get rid of them the way you can get rid of features. Here are two apps that let you: Have the user pick "what to keep" Delete the unused apps. It removes them from the phone and puts them in storage. Both of these tasks are quite easy. The apps can remain on your phone for as long as you like. You can change

.Pharmacological evidence for excitatory amino acids in the nucleus paragigantocellularis of the cat. The nucleus paragigantocellularis of the cat brainstem was studied using a microiontophoretic technique. Stimuli used were glutamate, aspartate, glycine, quisqualate, ibotenate, and kainate. Pharmacological studies showed a clear excitatory-inhibitory profile for quisqualate, and a mixed one for glutamate and ibotenate. Aspartate, glycine, and kainate appeared to be ineffective at stimulating a population of paragigantocellular cells. The results obtained are discussed in relation to recent hypotheses concerning the functional role of nucleus paragigantocellularis in the control of body movements.Q:
"Failed to open stream" on file upload in rails 4 I'm doing a website with rails 4.0.0 and ruby 2.0.0. I'm new on this. I'm trying to make a form on my index to upload file, but is causing this error: Errors::FileUploadError in Pages#index "Failed to open stream: No such file or directory # {ActionController::StackTrace.new(ApplicationFrameException).join(" ")}" My code: link to image and my model: class Pages validates :title, presence: true validates :content, presence: true, length: {maximum: 250} validates :thumbnail, presence: true def thumbnail original_size = [200, 200] open(self.path, 'rb').read File.open(self.path, 'rb') do |f| %w(width height).each { |size| f.seek(size * original_size.first) } end end end The images are on folder called 'assets/images' the error is calling on: File.
