Maybe it's because he's from Orange County. Or if he's from San Francisco, which this guy is, I can understand. If you're from LA, it's not a bad thing." "As far as where he is from, there's really not much I can say about where he is from, because at this point, there's no reason to go ahead and spread rumors about someone. We're here to entertain the fans and just let them know what's going on in the UFC." There you have it folks! Ronda Renee's big Knockout 2 press conference in San Jose, California. Gemma T. and I are going to be live Tweeting the press conference and I will be posting the highlights later tonight on TheMemorableChronic. Ronda Renee is rumored to appear at the press conference and she will be answering lots of questions from the fans. The first question could very well be from yours truly. As much as I love Mitchell Frank's eyes, they're not the most compelling thing about this doll. In fact, there aren't many elements that make up his face. The color palette is rough, with silver hair that probably needs some blending and a purple shirt that probably needs some blending, too. Although it's from a retailer like Games Workshop, I think this model is still a fairly accurate rendition of the elven race. His face has a very organic feel and his eyes are well-proportioned for a model that's meant to portray an elf with slender features. Plus, the elves, as they're portrayed in the Eberron setting, have far more pronounced facial features than the humans do in the Forgotten Realms. Two heads are just better than one, and if you're lucky enough to score a Cephalad Head model, your potential for facial interactions is immense! In addition to the standalone model, Games Workshop has also released a variety of miniatures, including these five: Although there's no doubt that the miniatures in this tower are going to be some of the most visually stunning miniatures that have ever graced the battlefield, there's also no doubt that they're the last, too.
