The spaceship game is simple, innovative, innovative, innovative, innovative...STOP. Your spaceship is launched in a random direction of space, the propulsion system is active, but the spaceship can not move forward. The real reason is: there is a cloud of space rocks in front of you. These space rocks move with the space and knock your ship which must be overcome by the spaceship. Do you want to see your spaceship destroyed in front of your very eyes and with that to make the ship under repair? Since the beginning of the year we began to develop a spaceship game in which you will have to overcome or even it's destruction. We started with the shooting mechanics and then the rocket concepts, the moon and many, many concepts. We think that our spaceship is very unique because it's the first game in which you are, well, just a spectator. You can follow the shooting mechanic and you can choose to be a shooter or a spectator. As a spectator you will be able to see the destruction of your ship. But the biggest reason that made us prefer this spaceship game is that the game is set in a universe from which you have no idea where you came from. You are completely lost. DIFFICULTY: The difficulty is different, always. The concept of the game is very simple: to prevent the destruction of the ship and to shoot down space rocks. GAME STRUCTURE: Your ship is fully destructible. You can, if you like, destroy the ship to become more resistant. But don't destroy the ship for the wrong reasons, like, for example, because you felt like it. There are spaceships in the game that are without propulsion system and that can only defend themselves from the shots. Most physics-based games, as in the case of TROID BLASTER, the difference is that they do everything in a world that is built up by the player. The player can, if he likes, add objects or destroy objects in his world. This is the essence of the game, which is then under construction until the player shoots the space rocks and the planet. Due to the unique destruction system of the ship, the player can also destroy the objects in the game by the other players. THE GAME: TROID BLASTER is designed as a "first time at sea" game. The spaceship you start with is small, but it contains the necessary tools to survive, and play the game. There is enough room to

Retro inspired side scrolling action, great story and awesome graphics.Come help the survivors to uncover their past and find their escape.Can you find the path and help them on their adventure? This is the sequel to the popular 3-day indie side scrolling action adventure Zombie Tales, which featured many features added. This is a very light version of NDSi, so it won't have all of the features that the full version will, but it is very simple, so it won't take long to learn and play, and will give you a good introduction to the platform. This version of the game is free. This game is almost exactly like the iOS version, so if you like it, it's not too hard to get the same game for your NDSi. This version of the game is free. It's been over a year since we released our first game on the NDS. We're proud to announce that Zombie Tales 2 is available on the Wii and the NDSi! The game is free and we'd love to hear your feedback about what features you'd like to see on the full version. Belly Pop brings a new spin on the multi-platform puzzle adventure genre. Belly Pop is a fun, puzzle-filled adventure where you play the role of a hamster that has to free himself from the confines of his belly. In an all-new over-the-top style you'll find yourself walking around the outside of your body, surrounded by all the food, treats and snacks you've ever wanted. In addition, there's a lot more to discover as you learn about your hamster self and his family. The story of Belly Pop is quite simple. You start out by taking a simple leap out of your belly. What could go wrong? A super cute teddy bear named Freddy arrives to let you know that you're on the right path, and encourages you to "just go, go, go!". "You're doing a great job!", and other inspirational quotes. From there you continue on your journey towards the outside, learning about your hamster self and his family as you go. You'll also learn that you have been searching for a brother and a sister, but that they're not here yet. With a little more exploration you'll learn more about the Belly Pop universe, while also learning more about your hamster self

What's new:

We've all heard about traffic fatalities, and in hearing that the number of fatalities, it makes us pause and think: how many people are killed in traffic accidents on our roads every year? It's a question that fascinates me. Why do people get into vehicles and end up killing each other? This thought - our dependency on the means of transportation and the vast number of traffic fatalities - came to my mind during a discussion with my Supervisor last week (not about highway beautification but about school services). We were discussing our roles, my role as a driver's assistant and his role as my Manager. In the end, the attention to detail he has developed (developing a module to determine the annual price of your business transportation) culminated in the annual report: the most fatal part of our business. It was one of the sentences in the report, which made me realize how many lives we take in someone else's hands. We share the roads each day, some with two or even three hands, sometimes five or even six hands. Now, it's time to plan for the roads, for the dependency of today's driver for the tomorrow's driver. While there's a lot we can do like bicycle lanes to make our roads better, there's also a lot we can do in ourselves by changing our conduct before and after the fatal event happens. In my book, the fatal hour is not the time during the accident but the hour after the accident, where it is our turn to blame someone and somehow let someone down. This goes for the immediate and the long-term self of the victim. It's not easy saying goodbye to someone you've known, especially in the moment, but it's a whole different story when we hear about a fatal accident. If you work with a potential customer in a restaurant or hospital, they may have difficulties talking about it. You shouldn't even tempt yourself asking just when did they lose their mum. It's not a trivial or nice thing to talk about. So my daughter Manju's long-term father passed away a few years back. He was a regular in the office and a notorious person who always had a suitable solution at hand when we faced challenging situations. We'll miss him, of course, but probably not as much as he would have been missing his wife. The Doctor: Chen Ling
