If so, you must use the same version of the software fix and download .Q: Does Chrome "Cannot enable device offline" for every page? I have a very strange problem and am at a loss to help figure out what is causing it.

After upgrading from Firefox to Chrome, I noticed that if I enable "Use a data connection even when offline" while logged in to a website, I can no longer use that site. I noticed that I couldn't visit the site when not logged in because the offline notice showed up. After some investigation, I found that in Chrome when I'm not logged in, when I go to I get a warning message that says "Cannot enable device offline" in the bottom left of the window. I can't tell if there is some kind of time-limit on it or not. The I noticed that when I do sign in, I can access the site just fine, and I can also visit the site when I'm not logged in. Also when I navigate to the site, Chrome doesn't give me a "Cannot enable device offline" message. A: This is probably caused by a recent Chrome Security update (v. 45.0.24
