Academics have access to a large database of case-study research reports. Each report is up to 30 pages long and contains up to 7,500 words in a general design with a structured outline and tables. Reporting can take several months to a year, but publication can be ready in a week and need only minor editing. Case studies are sourced from leading academics across the region and describe current practice in the area being researched. They are organised according to major themes and sub-themes. Within each theme, sub-themes are then used to organise the specific studies (e.g. agriculture, ecology, business, politics and government, health, education, culture and research). Each case study is hosted on theResearch Reports page of the new Research Database. You can browse case studies by theme, and select specific case studies to read in the 'Clone Report' by simply clicking on the Study Reference number link. We are unable to share reports or allow them to be downloaded from this site due to copyright restrictions. 980 So.2d 247 (2008) WILKINSON-TINDERMAN, L.L.C., Appellant, v. Lori THOMPSON, Appellee.
