
Port 0002 Hub 0003 Driver Zip

A: It is a USB hub on the other end of the blue port: Bus 002 Device 002: ID 04f2:b2eb USB 2.0 hubs are reliable when there is a PC with Windows on it and a device plugged into the hub that support being slave-enabled. In most cases this can be done with a software tool called the USB Device Selector Download Here This tool allows selecting the USB bus the device is plugged into, setting up the power requirements, and also setting the device's slave-enabled attribute This enables the attached device to behave like it was a hardware device, such as a USB keyboard or flash drive. So, in this case, to slave the device, you could set the bus to Bus 002 Device 001 and then set the slave-enabled attribute to True. Once you do that the hub should now work in Windows in the same way that other USB devices do. Assuming that the hub is the only device on that USB bus, this can be done with an attached USB keyboard. The key is to be sure that the keyboard is connected to the Bus 002 device, not the Host controller. For example: Bus 002 Device 002: ID 04f2:b2eb Bus 002 Device 001: ID 1d6b:0002 Linux Foundation 2.0 root hub Bus 001 Device 002: ID 045e:0741 Microsoft Corp. Tablet PC Pen Bus 001 Device 001: ID 1d6b:0002 Linux Foundation 2.0 root hub Or in this case: Bus 002 Device 003: ID 04f2:b2eb Bus 002 Device 001: ID 1d6b:0002 Linux Foundation 2.0 root hub Bus 001 Device 003: ID 07d1:3c16 D-Link System, Inc. CP210x Wireless LAN. Bus 001 Device 002: ID 045e:0741 Microsoft Corp. Tablet PC Pen Bus 001 Device 001: ID 1d6b:0002 Linux Foundation 2.0 root hub Note also that the host-controller of USB Hubs cannot provide power to devices on the USB bus, and, further, it is unnecessary and not possible to do that
