A: It looks like your IDLE command is getting executed too early, before the file is "completely downloaded". EDIT: I now see that your post is about a problem related to IDLE, but that it seems that this can be solved by the proper execution of the IDLE command inside a thread of the main thread. You can see in some of the comments that the solution is to make the code "sleeping" inside the IDLE command. Make sure that you're keeping that in mind. The above link goes into more details. Making great use of reclaimed building materials, this landmark Taormina, Italy home is far from being dull or boring. The building itself was once a silk factory that was converted into offices and showrooms and it has been enjoyed by someone for almost 100 years. Today however, it has been split into four different apartments and forms part of the current home of architect Gianluca Lacquanti who was commissioned to transform the building. The apartments are designed to blend the functions of an open plan loft-style living area with space for the owner's living room, guestroom and study. The designer has managed to create a luxurious room which utilises a wealth of space, with big windows, a stunning 3.5 metre high ceiling and a sunken sitting area which creates an intimate bedroom at one end of the room with a glass walkway that links the two areas. // Generated by class-dump 3.5 (64 bit) (Debug version compiled Jun 9 2015 22:53:21). // // class-dump is Copyright (C) 1997-1998, 2000-2001, 2004-2014 by Steve Nygard. // #import "ICDPViewControllerBase.h" #import "AKICSEntryViewDelegate-Protocol.h" @class AKICSEntryView, NSArray, NSImage, NSObject, NSString, NSTextField, NSView; @interface ICDPRemoveEntriesFromAllMyCapabilityViewController : ICDPViewControllerBase { NSArray *_selectedPaths; NSObject *_delegate; NSString *_searchText;
