But I had some questions. I was thinking about taking martial arts for the first time and I was looking into the dojang. I am training for self defense, so I was wondering if I could find a dojang in the area that could provide the dojo experience and training that I am looking for. Especially since I will be the only one training there.

We don't currently offer dojangs, but if you e-mail me (worldwidekarate@gmail.com) I can provide you with contact information for a local dojang in your area that you could visit. If you're looking for group lessons, check out WWA's online training forum.

I know that you can find me a dojang, but if I wasn't sure what kind of training I need, I wouldn't know what to look for or what to be expecting, also, I didn't want a typical dojo with a lot of bells and whistles, etc. Posted
