open your original master. its time to master again with vinyl master pro. while the changes in the tune is now more or less complete, its time to fine tune your master. in the vinyl master pro window, you can choose a reference master to compare and evaluate your mastering against. or, you can create your own reference master using a representative song or album, or even itunes if you prefer. note that vinyl master pro uses the same mastering settings youve already established in the vinyl master assistant window. to start the mastering process, simply open vinyl master pro, click the set button under the letter bank (a, b, c, or d), and open your original master. click the play button to start the mastering process. listen to how your mastering sounds before and after. its always a good idea to take a look at the peak meter and listen to the total dynamic range and volume. turn the gain match knob to the right or left to dynamically adjust your master so that it sounds best without pushing the peak meter too high and clipping distortion. the next step is to apply the master eq to remove distracting high frequencies and boost the signal, which can sound a bit harsh or dark. to help you do this, izotopes vinylmaster pro 2.5 crackl adds a sophisticated, interactive eq for the mastering phase, allowing you to define specific frequency ranges and adjust the amount of bass, treble, midrange and top end boost. theres also a mastering limiter that lets you adjust the overall volume of the mix, and an optional noise gate lets you limit the maximum amount of noise that may be present in the file.
