the upcoming 2018 biopic about the legendary rapper, actor, and producer tupac shakur is directed by antoine fuqua. the film is based on the autobiographical book, me against the world: a life of tupac shakur, written by sean combs. the film follows shakur's journey from brooklyn to the hip-hop world. at the age of 14, tupac moves to california with his stepfather, master p, and his mother, afeni. soon after, he becomes a member of the notorious rap group, digital underground. after the group is disbanded, shakur takes on the name 2pac. later, tupac becomes one of the first rappers to sign with a major label, interscope records. the film follows shakur's journey from brooklyn to the hip-hop world. at the age of 14, tupac moves to california with his stepfather, master p, and his mother, afeni. soon after, he becomes a member of the notorious rap group, digital underground. after the group is disbanded, shakur takes on the name 2pac. later, tupac becomes one of the first rappers to sign with a major label, interscope records. while the premise behind green book is compelling enough, the way the story is presented with verve, humor, and heart breaks down barriers for audiences to understand the true nature of racism. the road movie follows tony lip (viggo mortensen) and dr. don shirley (mahershala ali), two men from vastly different backgrounds. while they initially meet as strangers in a hotel in alabama in 1962, they quickly become best friends and work together to help shirley with a tour to perform at an italian nightclub in new york. their relationship is tested, however, when they make their way to the nightclub, as they are asked to make a roadie the club's opening act.

i thought i was just getting music for free, but the occasional movie clips i downloaded -- which are always a small fraction of the whole song or album from which they were taken -- were usually copyrighted. that's why i've been having problems downloading and playing music lately. in any event, it was while i was on the internet at my birthday party that i downloaded juice's "california love" music video for the first time. up until that time, i had never seen a live-action "california love" -- or any tupac music video -- online. i was pretty excited to see it. i was amazed at how realistic it looked, as if i had been watching the dvd. latin rapper eazy-e is fronting a group of west coast hip hop artists called n.w.a, whose music is peppered with profanity and sexist and homophobic lyrics. when the san fernando valley chapter of the national organization for women holds a press conference in los angeles demanding that this kind of stuff be censored in music, the resulting public outcry forces l.a. radio stations to cancel the group's radio shows. now two of n.a's members, ice cube and dr. dre, have a new group called death row records. ice cube enters the record shop, and steals eazy-e's idea of making great music, the style of eazy e. (in the film cube claims he stole the idea from eazy-e, to which eazy-e complains, saying, "i think he's the one that stole it from me. the way i look at it, it's like this: he's the turd sandwich in the butt; i'm the butt in the toilet.") the sensational rise and fall of miami's biggest rap group is depicted in this biopic. the record company run by dre, and the rappers themselves are all still very real to the people who lived through it. watching dre's maturation from being an independent producer to an iconic producer can be seen in his moves, his business savvy and his incredible talent. the film is candid and gives the most factually accurate portrayal of this group yet. 5ec8ef588b
