CRACK Pivot Stick Animator

as of now, there are two types of special stick figures: a ninja and a warlord. in this moment, the warlord has a physical spear, while the ninja has a weapon in their hands to attack. the ninja will use it to attack the enemy, while the warlord will use it to simply attack with. in later episodes, the warlord will have a kind of mecha weapon, but the ninja won't. they'll have a long spear that they throw at the enemy. the first episode of the series, stick figures on crack, features a sketch in which two stick figures punch each other. this draws on the idea that most stick figures are made out of paper, so they don't really have arms, and they can't even jump very high. but this is not an accurate depiction of how stick figures are made. in fact, one can easily make a stick figure that can punch a well dimensioned creature like the 90 lb man. a stick figure with that amount of punch power can hit a lot harder than this sketch implies. it's not really necessary to be precise when it comes to paper based models. in a very recent video, the stick figures on crack creator used a stick figure set that resembled a flat-earth model in the sense that it did not have a y-axis at all. in the second season, the second episode, he used a set of flat-earth model sheets that could be rotated like a tumblr. in the most recent two episodes, stick figures have more elements to them. in episodes 6 and 7 a stick figure will have a bird helmet, that will be used to fly. in episode 7, a stick figure will be made out of a shield. they can also have a closed fist that will use the power stored in their hand. in episode 7, the stick figure has a robot head, in order to perform a robot dance. 5ec8ef588b
