Flashback is a file recovery technology, which makes use of a memory card, an external USB hard drive, or even an internal HDD to recover lost data. In other words, Flashback can be used to retrieve files and folders from a broken system, and restore the lost data to a new one. With Flashback you can recover information from a: 1. Crash 2. Missing hard drive 3. Corrupted partition 4. Firmware corruption 5. Hard drive failure 6. System panic 7. Virus attack 8. Hardware malfunction 9. Segmentation fault You can also recover lost data by using a complete system recovery tool such as "System Commander", "Ultimate Boot CD", "System Rescue CD", or "Knoppix". IMPORTANT: Before you begin, make sure that you have a complete system rescue tool. When you start Flashback, you will see a dialog box, in which you need to select the folder where your files and folders are stored on the system. Then Flashback will show you the files or folders that you need to recover. You can recover a set of files or folders by clicking the Select All or Select Files button. If you want to recover a particular file or folder, click the Select File button to view it. The selected files or folders will be recovered into a new folder on your hard drive. You can recover any number of files or folders. If the hard drive is damaged, you may receive the "Please insert a different hard drive" error message, in which case you can select another hard drive to recover files. If you can't find the data you are looking for, you can try a few other file recovery techniques. You can also use the trial version of Flashback to try out the feature. Note: To find your missing data, you need to first find out which drive has the data. To do this, you can use Disk Management, or you can use the file system recovery tools as mentioned above. How to use Flashback to recover data from hard drive(s): Please note: This is a video tutorial, and the steps are explained to the best of our ability. STEP 1. Open Flashback on your computer system. STEP 2. Select the folder where you wish to recover files from the system. STEP 3. Select the files or folders you wish to recover. STEP 4. Click the Select File button. STEP 5. You will
