Performance with LR 5.2 has not been as good as it was with LR 4.2 (along with CS5). I do not know what version of CC/CS or processor I have but I have the 64 bit version of Photoshop which has always been fantastic with processing power, so it is not as if it has anything to do with the processing. I am going to assume it is related to the processing of the DNG files. I have looked to see if the other PS version would do this as well. I would suggest that the crew look to upgrade my PS version since there is a 5.x version of PS which has nothing to do with the Lightroom 5.x version. I would` t use Lightroom 5.x as I do not have the HDD space to accept all the files that would be created. I had the beta for Lightroom 4.3 for some time, but never installed it. After reading this review, I` ve installed the software and started a few projects. I` ve got a slight problem with the performance community. I had a DNG file that was about 6200 by 2000 pixels. After the Lightroom 5 upgrade, it has gotten longer and longer to create thumbnails. This is a 64 bit machine (2.67 ghz processor) with 3.5g memory. I` ve tried increasing the memory to 4.5g and currently on 4.0g. It seems to be persisting with the longer and longer creation of thumbnails after begin done. I have the product registry keys all entered properly and the publisher keys as I understand it. I should also say that I` m not connected to the internet or using any of my other programs - simply processing images.

In addition, there'll be a regular version of the app, with more capability for iPad users to get creative. One of the most prominent improvements in this new release of Photoshop will be the ability to create printed material from anything you can view in the Photoshop app. The preview tool, called Web To Print, will print almost anything you view in the app. However, you'll have to pledge for the feature. The software can spot people in a photo and find faces not visible in the image, or even dial up to improve the image. It can also detect objects — say, a billboard, or a rusty pipe — that you can then remove. Now, you can use the software to change people's appearance — so water in a landscape becomes a glass of wine. The machine-learning capabilities of the software determine what you need to do to the picture. Sometimes it's a very small tweak that makes a big difference. But Photoshop Elements too will work with the software, with its own AI. Adobe Photoshop on iPhone
