Kehidupan Aku di Sajadi Dari Syekh Siti Jenar. Q: how to swap two elements in an array without using element at index 1 I need to swap two elements in an array which are both less than index 2. In other words, I need something like this: i=3; j=4; array[i] = array[j]; array[j] = array[i]; So far, I use this method: static void swap(int[] array, int index1, int index2) { int temp = array[index1]; array[index1] = array[index2]; array[index2] = temp; } But it's not working. Any ideas? A: Let me try to give you a simpler implementation. public static void swapElements(int[] array, int index1, int index2) { int temp = array[index1]; array[index1] = array[index2]; array[index2] = temp; } This is a simple one line implementation of swapping two elements of an array. You don't need to access the elements of the array using index1 and index2. A: The element in the array is always at address 1, so you need to access the array via an offset, not an index (otherwise you are effectively modifying the array's length, which will be a negative number, which is not valid), and then it's just a matter of swapping two elements: int[] tmp =

I could almost hear the wording resonate in my head, "Are you sure that you really want to do this? It made me laugh. I could not help but chuckle. But the thing is, it also made me think. I asked myself, "Are you sure that you want to do this?" And suddenly, things that I was putting off, seemed important. Even life-changing things. In the past, I might have been like, "No way Jose!" But now I am a different person. And my life is very different. I may not be totally happy, but in some ways, I am more content than I have been in a long time. So no, I am not saying I have a perfect life by any means. But I know that things I have been putting off are not as important anymore. I have a chance to make a life change. But of course, I am going to have to be willing to make sacrifices. No man is an island. And I need someone to help me. I need something to hold onto. So "Are you sure that you really want to do this?" Of course I want to do this. You see I am not stupid. I am smart enough to know that I need to do this. So you know, for me it is easier to ask myself, "Are you sure that you want to do this?" 9 comments: the last time i was actually afraid of something I was pregnant with the first one, and also when my mother died, i was thinking that we'd never know the love and the meaning that she gave me. unfortunately, it was true, and it was a really, really tough couple of years. but i got over it, and now i am really grateful for her.
