I need my CI to pull the master (latest), develop and a few other branches off of this repository but my current stage is the only branch I'm able to successfully push to. Here is the GitLab CI config image: php:5.6-5.6.16-apache-lighttpd services: - docker:dind stages: - build buildphp: stage: build script: - composer install - apache-lighttpd-setup - phpunit - vendor/bin/phpunit The issue I have is that only the master branch can be pushed through to GitLab via the repository, however the other branches work (this is currently running on a build that's triggered via the master branch) Do I need to add these branches or change the build-php stage to allow the build to run all branches? Cheers A: The issue I had was caused by my gitlab.rb configuration I had run GitLab through docker but I was missing the ENV variable GITLAB CELL. This is the environment variable that contains the base path to your GitLab cell. The reason I was only getting the master branch is that I was setting it to a location for a different project.
